English Language Teachers' Interaction Forum (ELTIF)

"India lives in her villages."- Mahatma Gandhi. ELTIF lives in, and works for the villages. Apart from the hundreds of programmes in Communicative English for children, ELTIF has been organizing annual national conferences and, once in three years, international conferences, too. Awareness programmes for parents and public, support programmes for housewives, empowerment programmes for semi-skilled workers, Kudumbasree women and tribal women—these are some of the other social activities which ELTIF has been promoting for the last 16 years. For ELTIF, teaching English is not just an academic activity confined to the four walls of the classroom; it is a means of reaching out to the far-marginalized. Moreover, ELTIF has been publishing a professional quarterly (Journal of ELTIF.ISSN 2230-7710) promptly and regularly for the last 10 years. About the Conference

The conference is just a humble attempt at consolidating not only the questions raised on academic platforms where language, literature and culture occupy prominence, but it also leaves space for the loud outcries of concerned parents, the soliloquies and asides of the depressed teachers, the suppressed sobs of the disadvantaged learners, too.

It is in this context, this two-day conference offers a common platform for all the stakeholders in the field. The underlying current which unites all the prospective participants is the inquiry: "how to function more effectively in English and through English". Therefore, this conference addresses the anguish of the learner of English, and at the same time, shares the anxiety of the creative writer, too.

The organizers look forward to the young and old, the novice and the veterans interacting on issues related to their academic existence.
